

An Important Note For APD Users

Apple continues to enhance its software to support the newest models of Macintosh computers. The version of Apple Personal Diagnostics (APD) you just purchased – version 1.1.3 – works with all Macintosh models announced through August 8, 1995. You can use it to test more than 140 different Macintosh computers – from the Macintosh Plus through the Power Macintosh 9500/132. (See the “Computers Supported by APD” file on the Application disk.)

IMPORTANT Be sure to review the Read Me file located on the APD 1.1.3 Application disk. This file contains installation instructions and late-breaking information that is not included in the manual.

Apple will periodically release new versions of APD to support the newest Macintosh models. We encourage you to send in your registration card so we can notify you when a new version becomes available.

Sincerely,
Apple Computer, Inc.
