Infopedia is truly the ultimate multimedia reference tool.

This Quick Start Guide provides installation information, an overview of Infopedia's features, and step-by-step procedures to help you explore Infopedia.

When you start Infopedia, Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia is automatically displayed. You may toggle to another book by clicking on the Active Book icon, each successive click activates a different book.

It is also possible to make a different book active by clicking the Book button and selecting a book from the list. If the topic you select does not exist in a book, the book's icon will be dimmed and will not be accessible.

The rest of this guide will help you get started with Infopedia.

Copying Entries and Selected Text

To copy an INFOPEDIA entry, choose Select All from the Edit menu to copy the whole article onto the clipboard. You can then go into your word processor and paste the text into a document by using the program's standard Paste function.

You can also copy just part of the article by highlighting a portion of the text. Position your cursor at the beginning of the text you want, hold down the mouse button, and drag it to the end of your selected text.

Then choose Copy from the Edit menu to copy the selected text onto the clipboard, and go into your word processor and paste the text into a document.

The Edit menu with Copy selected

Printing Text or Pictures

Choose Print from the File menu to print the current text, tables, or pictures that appear in the Content Window. If you want to print only a picture, then resize it to fill the content window. INFOPEDIA displays the standard Macintosh print dialog box. Select your requirements, and INFOPEDIA will print your selection.

The File menu with Print selected

The Browser

The Browser is an alphabetical list that displays all the topics in INFOPEDIA. You can manually scroll through this list to find your topic, but if you know the title of the topic for which you are looking, it's much faster to type it into the "Follow-Me" field. As you type each character, the Browser automatically skips to the appropriate location in the topic list. Frequently you need not even type the complete topic to have reached your destination in the list, the first few letters are sufficient.

Using the Browser, you can view a list of all the books that contain entries on a chosen topic. You can also choose the book you want to open first.

Some entry titles are very long and don't appear fully in the Browser window. The horizontal scroll bar at the bottom of the Browser allows you to display the entire title.

The Browser functions differently depending on which of INFOPEDIA's six views is currently active. The next few pages of this guide will give you a summary of the different views and how they can help you quickly find the information you need.

Type in the "Follow Me" field to adjust the Browser List.

Index View

Index View is a great place to start exploring INFOPEDIA, since it gives you access to every single entry in all of INFOPEDIA's books. When you're in Index View, every INFOPEDIA entry appears in alphabetical order in the Browser.

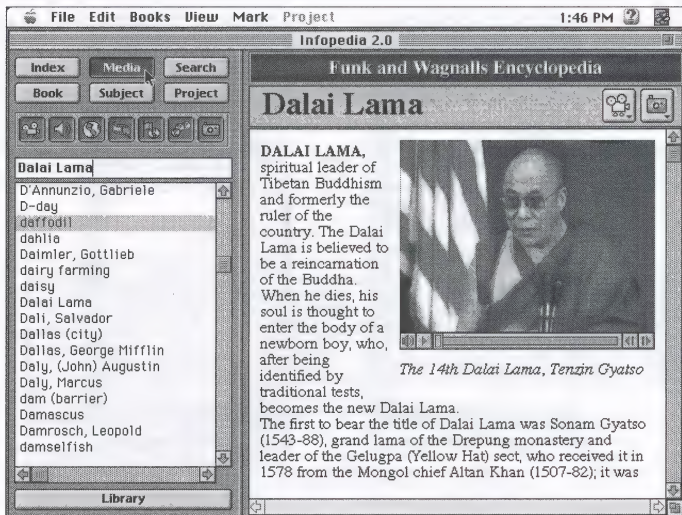

The Index View

Media View

Media View customizes the Browser list to show only entries that include photos, videos, morphing maps, animations, sound clips, maps or Quick Facts displays for countries. A row of icons above the Browser represents each type of media. Click on the icons to filter the list and display only the kind of media you want to see. If you don't want to view articles with sound clips, for example, click the appropriate icon. All articles containing only sound clips are filtered from the Browser list. To reactivate this media, click the sound clips icon again.

Media icons also appear above the Content Window of the current entry. If an entry contains both video and sound clips, for example, the appropriate icons appear just above the Content Window.

For a complete list of all the particular media elements associated with an article, click the appropriate icon above the Content Window. Choose the media element you wish to see from the drop-down list.

The Media View

Search View

With Search View, you can search for entries that include specific words and phrases. You can perform either a concise or expanded search.

For a concise search, simply type a word or phrase in the search field, then click the Find button or press Return on your keyboard. All the entries containing the requested text appear in the Browser with a three-letter prefix indicating the book in which the entry appears.

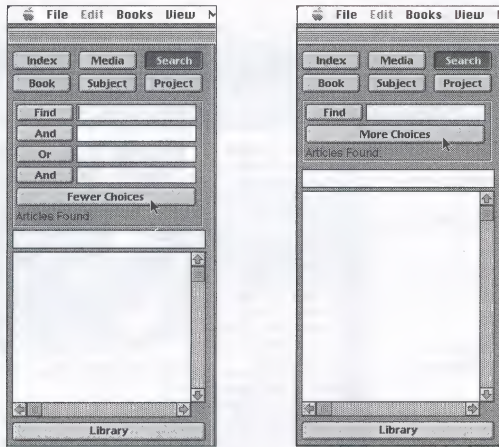

Just below the search field, you get a tally of the total number of entries found which matched your search request.

Double click a topic in the Browser list. The entry appears in the Content Window. The requested text is highlighted whenever it appears in the article.

Want to broaden your search by simultaneously looking for more than one word or phrase? Just click the More Choices button.

With More Choices, you have three additional fields. You can now broaden your search using the commands AND and OR. Click on the command button for each search field to switch between the two commands. For example, if you enter the words "Automobile" and "Motor" in the search fields and add the AND command, the search retrieves only entries containing both words.

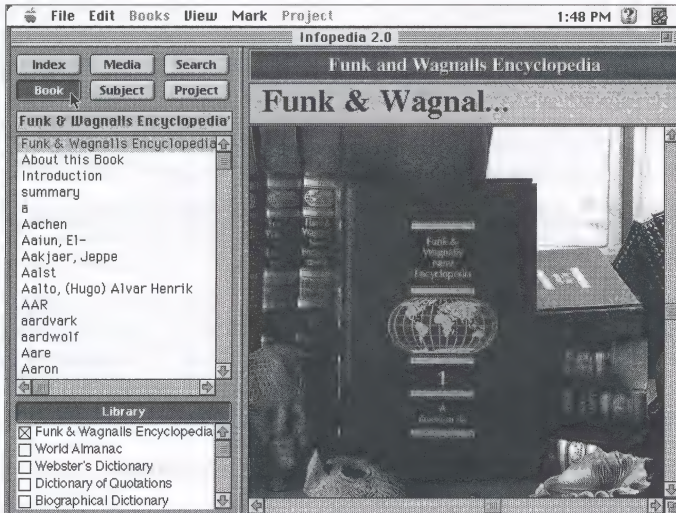

For further information about searching for specific texts and topics, see the on-line Infopedia Guide.

The Search View

Book View

Book View gives you the look and feel of working in a real library, displaying the entire contents of any book, including covers, introductions, and explanatory notes. The Funk & Wagnalls Book View contains the complete bibliography with thousands of additional sources and reference aids. Choose the book you wish to view from the INFOPEDIA reference collection by clicking the box next to the title.

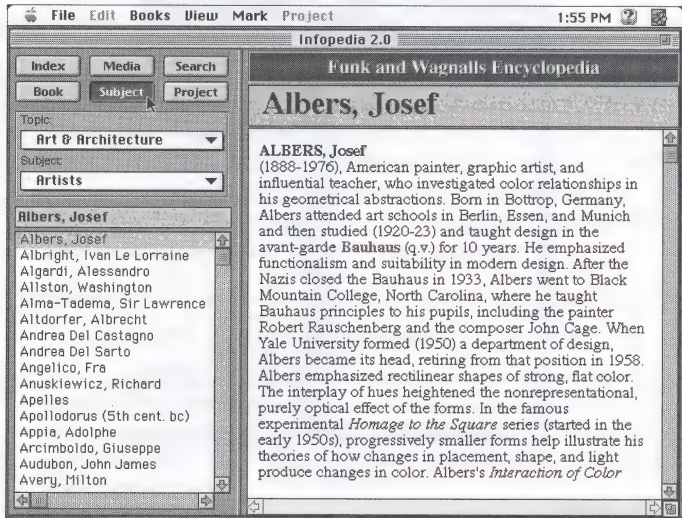

For more information about Book View, see the on-line Infopedia Guide.

The Book View

Subject View

In Subject View, you can view a list of entries within a particular area of interest. For example, to view entries related to Native Americans, click the Topic Bar, and choose U.S. History from the pop-up menu that appears. Now click the Subject Bar for a pop-up menu listing subjects within U.S. History, and choose Native Americans. The Browser displays only the relevant articles.

For more information about Subject View, see the on-line Infopedia Guide.

The Subject View

Project View

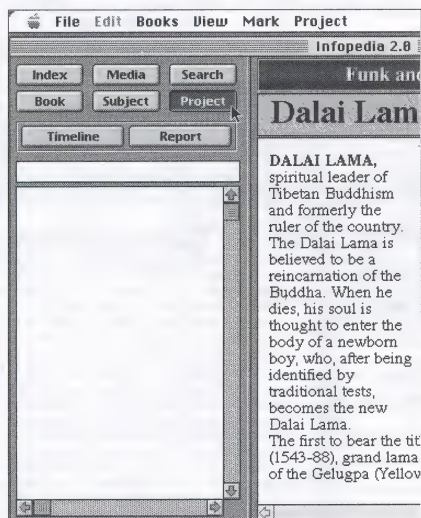

Project View gives you an easy, dynamic way to organize your INFOPEDIA research into integrated, printable projects. With Project View, you can create a customized Browser of INFOPEDIA entries. To add the current entry to your project, select Add Current from the Project menu. The current entry name appears in the Browser. To add marked articles to your project, choose Add Marked from the Project menu. Your selection of articles appears in the Browser list.

Click the Project button to save the current project, open a previously saved project, or start a new one.

In Project View, you can also generate automated, customized timelines of significant dates with a single click. Just click the Timeline button to create a timeline based on the entries included in your current project. To print a copy of your timeline, choose Print from the File menu. To copy your timeline, choose Copy from the Edit menu, and INFOPEDIA copies your timeline onto the clipboard.

Project View creates printed research reports. Just click the Report button and fill in your name, project title, and date in the resulting dialog box. INFOPEDIA then prints a custom report which includes all text entries from the current project.

For more information about Project View, see the on-line Infopedia Guide.

The Project View

On-line Help

INFOPEDIA's comprehensive Infopedia Guide is a convenient way to learn about INFOPEDIA's features while you are working with the program. Simply click the Apple Help icon in the upper right corner of the screen to access the Infopedia Guide.
